

Eisenhower Global Scholars

Eisenhower Fellowships is seeking outstanding applicants to participate in the Eisenhower Global Scholars program in 2023-2024.

Eisenhower Global Scholars will embark on an all-expenses-paid year of post-graduate study leading to a Master's Degree in Public Policy with an emphasis on international diplomacy at the Blavatnik School of Government at the University of Oxford or a Master's Degree in International Relations with an emphasis on the global economy and entrepreneurship at the School of Global and Public Affairs at IE University in Madrid.

We are looking for diverse, dynamic doers who have a demonstrated commitment to public service or fostering entrepreneurship, change agents seeking a lifelong engagement with an influential network of global leaders.

Applicants for the Global Scholarship Program are students admitted to Oxford and IE and should have an exceptional academic record with an impressive upward trajectory that ranks them near the top of their peers.

In addition to academic ability and achievement, applicants must demonstrate a high level of commitment to public service, as evidenced by their chosen career path in the public, private or non-profit fields and/or an outstanding record of community service.

Applicants must be U.S. citizens or legal permanent residents and have graduated from a four-year American university with a 3.7 Grade Point Average (out of 4.0) preferred. Candidates should demonstrate a track record of leadership and achievement and a commitment to tackling real world challenges through a concrete project idea. The preferred age range is 20 to 30.

Leaders bettering the world around them.
